UCT African studies special collections library houses some of the rare material from the 19th and 20th centuries: newspapers, periodicals, journals that contain information about the indigenous people and their(our) societies. Newspapers as Isigidimi samaXosa, Imvo Zabantsundu, Kafir express, Izwi, etc are all stored there. early Xhosa and Zulu dictionaries, as well as unpublished collections of testimonies and folklore of Africans by African voices have this building as their storehouse. This is home to humanities researchers interested historical, language or sociological issues. And this storage is on fire. Most of the early newspapers are digitized, but some issues are not. The thought of losing all of this material is so devastating. This would be one of the great historic losses of this century!

Dozens of people due to be vaccinated against Covid-19 using the Pfizer-BioNTech jab were injected with normal saline instead as the result of an unexplained blunder by French medical workers.

Some 140 people who attended the vaccination center at Reims University Hospital in the town of Epernay, 130km northeast of Paris, erroneously received injections on Tuesday.

The health authorities said that they've investigated the incident, but haven't explained how such a mistake was possible.

White House Weighs Whether To Back "Open Vaccine" Push Opposed By Bill Gates, Big Pharma

BY TYLER DURDEN

As the latest wave of India's COVID-19 outbreak metastasizes into a full-blown crisis, India and other developing economies are seizing the opportunity to push back against the Bill Gates-backed status quo that prioritizes the intellectual property rights of big pharma over access to plentiful and cheap vaccines in the developing world.

Gates has continued to insist that the current approach is the best option for the developing world. But increasingly, it seems the governments of India, South Africa, Nigeria and other emerging powers disagree. And as a showdown looms at the WTO, Washington is being pressed to confront the obvious hypocrisy in backing Gates over the "open vaccine" movement.

Pfizer is accused of bullying Latin American governments by demanding they grant indemnity against potential civil claims relating to the vaccine. (Adrian Johnson/TBIJ)

Pfizer has been accused of “bullying” Latin American governments in Covid-19 vaccine negotiations and has asked some countries to put up sovereign assets, such as embassy buildings and military bases, as a guarantee against the cost of any future legal cases

Pfizer “is trying to eke out as much profit and minimise its risk at every juncture with this vaccine development, then this vaccine roll-out. Now, the vaccine development has been heavily subsidised already. So there’s very minimal risk for the manufacturer involved there.”
